UCLA GRADUATE SCHOOL OF Education &
Information
Studies

Department of Information Studies

Google™ Custom Search

Search

| About IS | Programs | Research | Diversity | Resources | Students | Faculty/Staff | Alumni |

IS Research

The Department of Information Studies faculty are renowned for excellence in research. They have made numerous contributions to the advancement of professional practice: developing standards for libraries, leading workshops, and serving as officers of national professional associations. Known for distinguished scholarship in the field, they have published extensively and delivered lectures around the globe.

Current Research Projects

Current projects noted are: the Alexandria Digital Earth ProtoType (ADEPT) / Alexandria Digital Library (ADL); CENS (Center for Embedded Network Sensing); Homework Center Outcomes; and InterPARES.

Completed Research Projects

Includes research projects such as Pluralizing the Archival Paradigm Project; PacBell / UCLA Initiative for 21th Century Literacies; Question Master; and Digital Portfolio Archives in Learning.

Research Centers

IS-supported centers focusing on research and outreach include the California Center for the Book and the Center for Information as Evidence.

Web Publications

Publications published by the UCLA Graduate School of Education & Information Studies include the GSE&IS Forum, a quarterly newsletter, and InterActions - UCLA Journal of Education and Information Studies, a peer-reviewed, online journal edited by UCLA GSE&IS students.

GSE&IS Faculty and Graduate Student Research Support

Resources to assist faculty and graduate students in seeking and obtaining external funding.

Research at GSE&IS

Updated: 6/15/09

UCLA