OUTLINE

- Introduction
- Why archive the web?
- Web archiving initiatives
- Methodology
- Findings and discussion
- Conclusion
- Question & Answers

INTRODUCTION

- In Malaysia currently, the federal government has developed a single gateway to information and services
- The Malaysian Government's official portal known as "myGovernment" website (www.malaysia.gov.my)
- To avoid losing the public records created in this manner, web archiving has become an issue for the Malaysian government

WHY ARCHIVE THE WEB ?

- Due to the ease with which content can now be posted on the Internet, organizations are faced with the extreme vulnerability of the information as internet documents are often updated, moved or even removed after a period of time (Fang, 2002).
- This problem is experienced daily by Internet users who received the familiar “404 Not Found” error when trying to access information using their web browser (Seneca, 2009; Hubberzt, 2005).

WHY ARCHIVE THE WEB ?

- Studies by Lyman (2003) indicated that 40% of the material on the net is gone after one year, and another 40% has been altered and only 20% of the material remains.
- Following these problems, Seneca (2009) lamented that our cultural heritage is at risk, and slowly becoming less and less complete and consistent on a daily basis.
- Australia has been seriously examining the preservation of the websites since at least 1994 (Woodyard, 2000)

WHY ARCHIVE THE WEB ?

- the British Library (BL) and the National Library of Wales (NLW) were carrying out similar pilots (Cunnea, 2005)
- The Library of Congress preserves the United State's cultural artifacts and provides enduring access to them.
- Several countries collaborated and formed the International Internet Preservation Consortium (IIPC) (Library of Congress, 2010)

WHY ARCHIVE THE WEB ?

- Services of IPPC: WebCite, Archive-IT, Hanzo Archives, PANDORA (PANDAS), BackupURL.com, freezPAGE snapshots, Website-Archive.com, PageFreezer, Compliance WatchDog and Aleph Archives
- Other initiatives: Web Archiving Service (WAS) by California Digital Library & The International Research on Permanent Authentic Records in Electronic Systems (InterPARES) by University of British Columbia, Canada

METHODOLOGY

- This study adopted the mixed methods research approach
- Purposive sampling was applied to select the respondents
- The population : Record managers and IT personnel in 24 Federal Ministries

METHODOLOGY

- The Federal Executive List in each of the Ministry's Human Resource Department was used as a sampling frame
- A total of 24 record managers and 24 IT personnel were selected
- Research instrument: Questionnaire and face-to-face interviews

CONCLUSION

- Lackadaisical attitude on the part of both record managers as well as IT personnel to the professional need to capture and preserve vital information on the website as a heritage and repository of knowledge for the benefit of future generations

CONCLUSION

- The problem could well be the lack of guidance and intellectual leadership on the part of the National Archives which has been entrusted under the National Archives Act (2003) for the preservation of all forms of record including those to be obtained through the webpages
- There is a consequence a lack of awareness training and lack of initiative in pushing for the right policies through government channels.

THANK YOU
